Report Cites Failures

Hijackers Crashed Flight 93

WASHINGTON | Passengers aboard United Airlines Flight 93 fought back against the hijackers but never actually made it into the cockpit, the Sept. 11 commission concluded.

The assertion, included in the panel's dramatic summary of the harrowing flight, contradicts the firmly held belief by some victims' families that passengers breached the cockpit and fought with hijackers inside during their final moments.

The commission concluded that the hijackers remained at the controls of the plane, "but must have judged that the passengers were only seconds from overcoming them."

The commission said the hijackers' destination was Washington. It praised the courage of the passengers and said their struggle "saved the lives of countless others, and may have saved either the Capitol or the White House from destruction." TED BRIDIS (AP)

Lapses left U.S. vulnerable to terrorists, 9/11 panel says

WASHINGTON | America's leaders failed to grasp the gravity of terrorist threats before the devastating attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, taking actions so feeble they never even slowed the al Qaeda plotters, a national commission said Thursday in a blistering report.

The panel warned "we are not safe" yet — and called for major intelligence changes. Its work is sure to reverberate across the presidential campaign.

In an exhaustive investigation of the deadliest attack in U.S. history, the commission noted numerous government missteps but did not cast blame on any official and stopped short of saying the hijackings could have been prevented.

It also did not blame President Bush and former President Clinton but did say they failed to make anti-terrorism a top priority.

The final report, issued as a book, largely mirrored preliminary reports released during the commission's 20 months of investigation.

Still, coming less than four months before the election, the politically sensitive report could be trouble for Bush, who has made his handling of terrorism the centerpiece of his campaign and has insisted he fully understood the threat.

The panel found that the "most important failure" leading to the Sept. 11 attacks "was one of imagination," the report said. "We do not believe leaders understood the gravity of the threat." TERENCE HUNT (AP)

Big Book, Little Car

The public relations wizards at Mazda sweetened the pot for the media on Wednesday, debuting their new Verisa compact car in Tokyo with what company officials claimed was the world's largest photo book. The 16-page book, which measures 10-by-11 feet and weighs 776 pounds, was produced to feature life-sized photos of the new vehicle. Mazda plans to submit the book to the Guinness World Records organization, but will have to settle for the nice free press they're getting in the meantime. (EXPRESS)

Sticky Feet

When Joyce Stewart of Martinsburg, W.Va., sits down to her daily cup of coffee, she likely won't attempt first aid on herself again. On Monday morning, Stewart used Minnesota-based 3M's liquid bandage to treat a crack on her heel and within minutes her foot was glued to the floor. Stewart, 59, of Martinsburg had positioned her left foot so that her heel was off of the floor and applied the liquid to the back of her foot. The Journal newspaper reported. Without realizing, the liquid had run from the back to the ball of her foot before she placed her foot flat on the floor again. It took three paramedics more than an hour and a bottle of baby oil to free her. (AP)

AT THE AIRPORT

Baggage Claim

An airline passenger wearing only a pair of pajama bottoms stole a baggage tractor at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport in Georgia and drove it onto an active runway early Wednesday, police said. Atlanta police say Robert W. Buzzell, 31, had walked out an exit door that had an alarm at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport. Flights were not affected by the incident, which took place before 6 a.m., airport officials said. The man was stopped by mechanics who asked him for an employee identification card. When he could not provide one, they escorted him to an office and called police. Airport officials said they are reviewing security procedures. (AP)

FOR THE BIRDS

Lost Signal

Organizers of a race for homing pigeons in southern Sweden were still scratching their heads in wonder Thursday after about 1,500 of the birds, famous for their ability to find their way home, went missing during the contest. Of the 2,000 pigeons let loose last week, only about 500 have returned to their lofts after the 93-mile flight between the cities of Ljungby and Malmoe, said Lars-Aake Nilsson of the Malmoe Homing Pigeon Club. In past races, the birds, all of which sport electronic identification tags around their feet, made the journey in about two hours. (AP)

FINAL FINDINGS

Members of the Sept. 11 commission and lawmakers reacted Thursday to the release of the panel's final report.

"We could not comprehend that people wanted to kill us, they wanted to hijack airplanes and fly them into big buildings."

— PANEL CO-CHAIR LEE HAMILTON

"I will ask our committee chairmen to hold hearings on these recommendations over the next several months, so we can act on them as quickly as possible."

— HOUSE SPEAKER DENNIS HASTER

"[T]hey've given us a charter, a course, a series of recommendations and now it's up to us to carry it forward."

— SEN. JOE LIEBERMAN, D-CONN.

For 9/11 Families, a Long Wait Ends

Victims' relatives plan to turn focus on Congress

WASHINGTON | Family members found vindication and a call to action in the Sept. 11 commission's report, saying they will now set their sights on persuading Congress to make sure Americans are better protected.

"The families know that this is an election year. We're going to hold these people's feet to the fire," said Debra Burlingame, whose brother Charles was the pilot on the hijacked plane that struck the Pentagon.

About 30 family members attended the commission's release of its final report, which recommends sweeping changes in U.S. intelligence agencies.

The victims' families have been both outspoken advocates for the commission and sometimes its harshest critics. They were credited by chairman Thomas Kean and

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., with forcing the creation of the independent inquiry, and compelling reluctant agencies and officials to hand over sensitive information.

Kean, in a private meeting with the families, asked them to continue to push those in government to adopt the recommendations.

Family members said they were eager to take up the cause, even if the report's findings offered a dismal assessment of repeated failures leading up to the 2001 attacks.

Matthew Sellitto, whose son, also named Matthew, died at the World Trade Center, said he would assign wider blame if action wasn't taken on the report's findings.

"If this gets pushed under the rug," he said, "I won't even blame Congress, I'll blame you and me."

Bush Hails Panel's Recommendations

Praises report's findings as 'very constructive'

WASHINGTON | President Bush praised as "very constructive" the recommendations in a new report Thursday on intelligence failures that led to Sept. 11, though his administration has reacted coolly toward a key proposal to establish a Cabinet-level national intelligence director.

Thomas H. Kean, Republican chairman of the independent commission that probed the attacks, and Lee H. Hamilton, Democratic vice chairman, formally handed Bush a copy of the independent commission's report in a Rose Garden ceremony.

Bush had fought the creation of the panel, resisted the release of some documents and battled against letting national security adviser Condoleezza Rice address the panel. But he embraced its work Thursday.

Bush called the report's recommendations "very constructive."

"I assured them that where government needs to act, we will," Bush said.

Later, White House spokesman Scott McClellan declined to say how Bush viewed specific recommendations in the report, or how long Bush would take to study them.

MISSED OPPORTUNITIES

The 9/11 panel's report outlined a series of "operational failures" by the government that allowed the terror plot to be carried out. Among the findings:

- Not discovering false statements on visa applications of some of the future hijackers.
- Failing to expand air travel no-fly lists to include names from terrorist watch lists.
- Not hardening aircraft cockpit doors or taking other measures to prepare for the possibility of suicide hijackings.

Army: 94 Cases Of Alleged Abuse

Nearly 40 prisoners died in U.S. custody in Iraq, Afghanistan

WASHINGTON | Thirty-nine prisoners have died in U.S. custody in Iraq and Afghanistan since the fall of 2001 and there have been 94 cases of proven or suspected abuse, the Army said in a broad new report giving a more precise and higher estimate of the scale of the abuse.

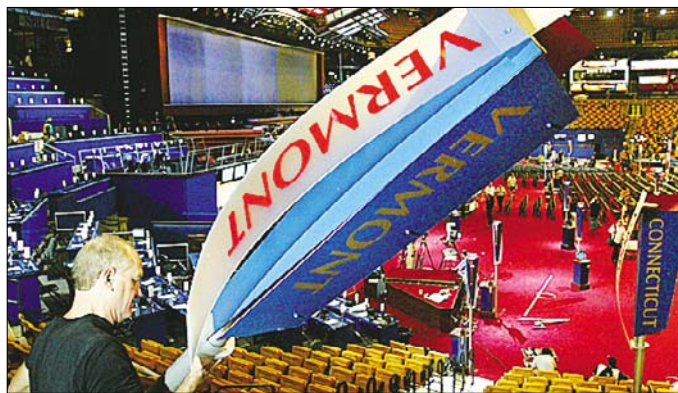

The acting Army secretary and its top general said they took responsibility for the abuses while insisting that they were the misconduct of enlisted soldiers or lower-ranking officers — and not sanctioned by Army leadership.

"These actions, while regrettable, are aberrations," said Acting Army Secretary Les Brownlee. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Peter Schoomaker said mistakes were understandable, though not excusable. Troops must be trained to contain their anger at prisoners who had been trying to kill them, he said.

Sen. John Warner, the Republican chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who had been pressing for the inspector general report for several weeks, called the last-minute hearing Thursday before Congress leaves for a summer hiatus. MATT KELLEY (AP)

House OKs Bill Limiting Gay Marriage Jurisdiction

WASHINGTON | Stung by a Senate setback on gay marriage, Republicans passed legislation in the House on Thursday to prevent federal courts from ordering states to recognize same-sex unions sanctioned elsewhere.

Democrats called the bill an unconstitutional attack on gays and the federal judiciary, and said its passage was just a matter of election-year politics.

A day before Congress closes down for six weeks, the 233-194, mainly party-line vote handed at least a symbolic victory to social conservatives who form a key Republican constituency. The bill has the strong backing of the Bush administration, but is not expected to make headway in the Senate. Last week, the Senate failed to advance a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage. MARK SHERMAN (AP)

Embattled Yukos Company Might Not Fulfill Oil Exports

The beleaguered Yukos oil company, which produces about 2 percent of the world's supply, said Thursday its $6.7 billion back-taxes bill could force it to run out of money within a month and leave it unable to fulfill its export contracts. The tax bill is part of a series of legal actions against Yukos and former CEO Mikhail Khodorkovsky that many analysts see as a Kremlin-initiated drive to punish him for funding opposition parties. Yukos accounts for about 20 percent of Russia's oil production. (AP)

Gruesome Discovery in Iraq

Bulgarians fear mutilated body is 2nd hostage's

BAGHDAD | Police discovered a decapitated body in an orange jumpsuit and a head in a bag on the banks of the Tigris River, authorities said Thursday, prompting fears that a second Bulgarian hostage has been killed.

Bulgarian officials were investigating whether the remains were those of Ivaylo Kepov, 32, one of two Bulgarians who were kidnapped

June 29 near Mosul. The Bulgarian Foreign Ministry said another headless body found in the Tigris on July 14 was identified as the other hostage — Bulgarian truck driver Georgi Lazov, 30.

A group affiliated with Jordanian militant Abu Musab al-Zarqawi said it kidnapped the Bulgarians and demanded Iraqi detainees be released in exchange for their lives. The group later sent a tape to Al-Jazeera that reportedly showed Lazov being killed.

Iraqi officials had worried that kidnappings could increase in the wake of a Philippine government decision to pull its troops to secure the release of Filipino truck driver Angelo dela Cruz. Dela Cruz was freed on Tuesday. (AP)

Train Crash In Turkey Kills Dozens

Critics had warned that tracks were too old for high-speed rail

MEKECE, TURKEY | Turkey's showcase express train derailed Thursday, killing at least 36 people and injuring about 60 after critics warned the old tracks along the Istanbul-Ankara line could not handle the new high-speed cars.

At least four cars overturned near the northwestern village of Mekece. Darkness hampered rescue operations, with soldiers searching the wreckage and treating the injured by flashlight.

It was not immediately known what caused the train to derail about halfway to its destination in the capital. But there was opposition when the line started operating June 4, with critics saying the tracks too old for the new trains. Nevertheless, authorities said they were not ruling out sabotage.

The crash marked a setback to Turkey's efforts to modernize its rail services and an embarrassment for Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, who launched the high-speed line with gala celebrations.

There were conflicting reports of casualties, with the government crisis center, health ministry and transportation ministry earlier saying between 128 and 139 people were killed. The agencies lowered the toll later without any explanation. (AP)

NATO May Boost Olympic Presence

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM | NATO is expected to approve a last-minute Greek request for extra counterterrorism help at next month's Olympic Games, alliance officials said.

The new plea — coming weeks after the alliance agreed to send air and sea patrols and experts in biochemical weapons — underscores fears that the Aug. 13-29 Games in Athens could provide a high-profile target for terrorists.

According to sources, a high-level meeting between Greek authorities and NATO's leadership will take place next week, during which the two sides are expected to work out the final details.

NATO headquarters refused to elaborate on the new request, but officials said issues of basing, command and control and who reports to whom had yet to be worked out. In Athens, the country's top law enforcement official insisted Thursday that foreign troops will not be deployed inside the country.

"There will not be any American,

Portuguese or French army in the streets, the venues or as snipers on rooftops or in any other Olympic-related facilities," Public Order Minister Giorgos Voulgarakis told a parliamentary committee on the Olympics.

Demands to boost Olympic security have pushed costs, already the highest in Olympic history, to at least $1.5 billion — 25 percent higher than estimated, Greek Deputy Finance Minister Petros Doukas said Wednesday. (AP)

Vigilantes Gave Captive to U.S.

Military admits it had contact with men who ran illegal Afghan jail

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | The U.S. military said Thursday it held an Afghan prisoner for two months after receiving him from three Americans who have been charged with torturing detainees at a private jail.

The admission followed claims by the group's leader that he had ties to the Defense Department. The American military insists the men acted on their own and has tried to distance itself from them and their leader, Jonathan Idema, a former U.S. soldier.

But U.S. Maj. Jon Siepmann acknowledged the military received a detainee from Idema's group at Bagram Air Base, north of Kabul, on May 3. Siepmann said suspicion grew as interrogators realized the detainee was not the Taliban suspect Idema said he was.

Afghan security forces seized Idema, two other Americans and four Afghans on July 5 after freeing eight prisoners from their makeshift jail in Kabul.

The seven defendants went on trial in Kabul on Wednesday, charged with hostage-taking, torture and firearms offenses. The men could be jailed for up to 20 years if convicted. STEPHEN GRAHAM (AP)

Sanctions Weighed For Sudan

New U.N. resolution threatens to punish government for Darfur

UNITED NATIONS | The United States circulated a revised U.N. resolution Thursday that threatened sanctions against Sudan if it doesn't make significant progress in arresting marauding Arab militias within 30 days.

Secretary of State Colin Powell met U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan for the second time in three weeks to step up pressure on Sudan to end the 15-month conflict in the western Darfur region, which has killed up to 30,000 and forced at least 1 million to flee their homes.

Powell told reporters in Washington he had received "very disturbing" initial reports from teams in the region about actions of the Janjaweed militias "and how the Janjaweed were supported by the government of Sudan." Khartoum has denied any involvement.

Meanwhile, Sudan's Foreign Minister Mustafa Osman Ismail accused the United States and Britain of meddling, saying their increased pressure was the same tactic they used against Iraq. (AP)

Canadian Court to Mull Gay Divorces

TORONTO | A lesbian couple is seeking what is believed to be Canada's first same-sex divorce in Ontario Superior Court.

The women, identified according to their lawyers' initials as M.M., 41, and J.H., 61, were married on June 18, 2003, one week after the Ontario Court of Appeal legalized same-sex marriage in the province. The couple separated five days after the wedding, ending an almost 10-year relationship, J.H.'s lawyer said.

"This is the first same-sex divorce case in Canada to our knowledge," M.M.'s lawyer said in court papers.

While courts in Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia and the Yukon territory have ruled that the right for gays and lesbians to marry is guaranteed by the Canadian constitution, the federal Divorce Act hasn't been amended to apply to same-sex couples. (AP)

Safety Consultant Dubbed a 'Fraud'

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA. | A safety consultant who inspected mammogram and other diagnostic machines at more than 50 hospitals falsified reports and miscalibrated radiation equipment for at least 15 years, federal authorities charged Thursday. No patients were endangered, they said.

Perry M. Beale also allegedly lied to authorities about his qualifications, saying he was certified by the American Board of Radiology and that he had received a master's degree from the University of Virginia in radiologic technology, nuclear medicine and radiological physics. He had no such degree, authorities said.

"We know now that Perry Beale was a fraud," said U.S. Attorney John L. Brownlee, who said he expects Beale to plead guilty to all 38 counts of mail fraud. (AP)

Metro Suspends SmarTrip Sales

Transit agency also puts an end to 2-car trains

WASHINGTON | Metro is temporarily suspending sales of SmarTrip cards and permanently suspending late-night two-car trains.

Metro officials said Thursday they have only about 20,000 of the plastic SmarTrip cards left. Although supplies will be trickling in, they have decided to halt sales next Monday, and resume again in September when a stockpile is built up.

Board members criticized managers who didn't foresee the shortage — especially after requiring SmarTrip cards to pay for parking at Metro lots beginning last month. Drivers without a SmarTrip card will have to buy paper farecards for the exact amount of the parking fee.

Meanwhile, Metro announced Thursday it was the end of the line for tiny late-night trains.

On June 27, Metro began operating two-car trains after 10 p.m.

Sunday-Thursday nights. But it angered passengers who were either shoehorned into sardine can conditions, or were left behind on station platforms.

Board members said the mini-trains were a mistake, and that they had based their original decision on winter ridership numbers — before the surge in summer tourism. (AP)

Feds Pay Up for Rail Extension in Va.

MCLEAN, VA. | The Federal Transit Administration awarded $59 million to begin engineering work on an extension of the Washington, D.C., Metrorail system that advocates hope will eventually stretch 23 miles to Loudoun County and Dulles International Airport.

Gov. Mark Warner and a host of federal, state and local officials touted the grant Thursday as a key step in transforming decades of discussions and planning about the mass-transit extension to reality.

The grant allows for engineering work on the project's first phase, an 11-mile extension from West Falls Church through Tysons Corner, then along the Dulles Toll Road to Wiehle Avenue near Reston.

Gov. Warner called Thursday's grant a key step in the extension to Dulles.

The engineering work should be completed by October 2005 and provide a detailed cost estimate of the first phase. Advocates are hopeful that the Wiehle Avenue extension could be completed by 2009.

The future of the full extension to Dulles is not as certain. Federal Transit Administrator Jennifer Dorn said the federal government has made no commitments to supporting the entire extension.

"At this point in time we are focused on the first phase," Dorn said. "This is the cost-efficient segment." MATTHEW BARAKAT (AP)

Warner Denies Clemency for Bailey

RICHMOND, VA. | Gov. Mark R. Warner declined Thursday to grant a clemency request from condemned killer Mark W. Bailey, clearing the way for him to be put to death Thursday night for killing his wife and 2-year-old son.

Bailey was scheduled to receive a lethal injection at 9 p.m. at the Greensville Correctional Center in Jarratt.

Bailey used a .22-caliber pistol to shoot his wife, Katherine, three times in the head as she slept early on Sept. 10, 1998, in their Hampton home. He gunned down his son, Nathan, moments later.

Bailey, 34, claimed he suffered from manic depression and was severely depressed. (AP)

Coors, Molson Team Up

Beermakers' merger to create third-largest brewery in N. America

DENVER | Adolph Coors and Canada's Molson announced plans to merge Thursday in a deal that would combine two old-line, family-run breweries into the third-largest beer-maker in North America.

The new company will be known as Molson Coors Brewing Co. and will market such brands as Coors Original and Coors Light, Molson Canadian, Keystone and Carling.

The deal was described as a merger of equals and would create a company with annual revenue of about $6 billion, putting it behind Anheuser-Busch and SAB Miller as the largest beer companies in Coors and Molson said their combination should generate $175 million a year by 2007 in cost savings and new revenue. But analysts have been skeptical of the rumored deal, saying they were uncertain how it would benefit the companies or save money. The U.S. market is flat and companies have begun working together to tap emerging markets overseas, particularly in China and South America. SANDY SHORE (AP)

AT&T to Stop Pitching Long-Distance

NEW YORK | AT&T, the nation's largest long-distance carrier, said Thursday it would stop seeking new customers for its traditional consumer long-distance service, the bedrock of the company known as Ma Bell. The announcement coincided with another big drop in quarterly profit.

AT&T said it will still serve its existing residential customers, but it said it will no longer pour $1 billion a year into winning new ones.

The move is the latest in a series of humbling events for the once-mighty telecommunications company, starting with its breakup by a federal judge in 1984.

From April-June, AT&T's profits were $108 million, down from $536 million in the same period a year ago. Revenue dropped to $7.6 billion, down from $8.8 billion. (AP)

Sports Weekend

MAN ON FIRE: Dale Earnhardt Jr. leaps from his burning Corvette after last Sunday's crash that landed him in the hospital with burns. Yet, he wants to race this weekend.

A Need for Speed

Earnhardt aims to race a week after major crash

AUTO RACING | Dale Earnhardt Jr. spends most of his time scrunched inside the cockpit of a stock car, on a high-speed chase for a NASCAR Nextel Cup championship.

Add up 38 races a year, qualifying, practice and test sessions, Earnhardt probably spends about 700 hours a year in his No. 8 Chevrolet.

So when a free weekend opens up on his schedule, why would the son of the late Dale Earnhardt fly across the country to compete in an American Le Mans Series race?

"Driving race cars is what I love doing," Earnhardt Jr. said when announcing his participation in last Sunday's race at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif.

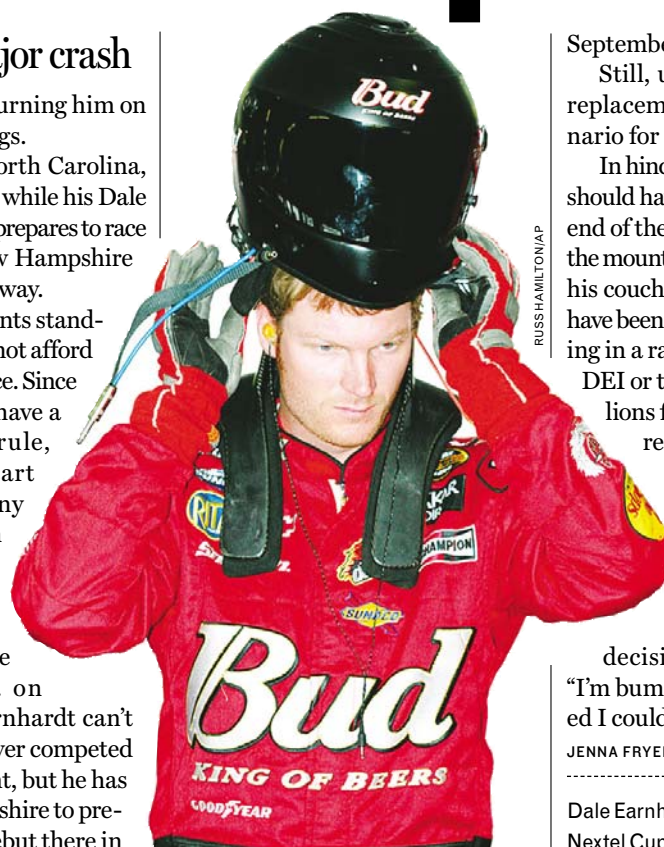

But what was supposed to be a fun, relaxing spin in a Corvette CR-5 turned into a frightening accident during practice that could have jeopardized his regular job. His car burst into flames, burning him on his chin and both legs.

Back home in North Carolina, Earnhardt is resting while his Dale Earnhardt Inc. team prepares to race this weekend at New Hampshire International Speedway.

Second in the points standings, Earnhardt cannot afford to sit out Sunday's race. Since NASCAR does not have a substitute driver rule, Earnhardt must start the race to earn any points and stay in contention for his first championship.

DEI plans to have Martin Truex Jr. on standby in case Earnhardt can't finish. Truex has never competed in a Nextel Cup event, but he has tested at New Hampshire to prepare for his series debut there in September.

Still, using Truex as an injury replacement is not the ideal scenario for Earnhardt or DEI.

In hindsight, Earnhardt probably should have spent his last off-weekend of the season at the beach or in the mountains. Heck, even sitting on his couch in his living room would have been a better idea than competing in a race that meant nothing to DEI or the sponsors who pay millions for Earnhardt to drive his red Chevrolet.

But that's not how racers live their lives.

Even from his hospital bed after the wreck, Earnhardt didn't second-guess the decision to race last Sunday.

"I'm bummed out and disappointed I couldn't run the race," he said.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. is second in the Nextel Cup points standings.

TV Lineup

→ DOUBLE VISION: The Baltimore Orioles host the AL Central-leading Minnesota Twins for a three-game set that features the extremes of Baltimore's pitching staff. On Friday (7:30 p.m. on Comcast), John Maine makes his debut. On Saturday (6 p.m. on UPN20), Sidney Ponson tries for his fifth win. And then in Sunday's finale (1:30 p.m. on UPN20), it's rookie sensation Daniel Cabrera going for the O's.

→ MASTERS: There's no rain on the parade of Michelle Wie, the teenage phenom who's part of this week's field in the Evian Masters in France, which ends Saturday (5 p.m. on the Golf Channel).

Wie is 2-under-par at the Evian Masters.

→ THE BURN: D.C. United, with 21 points, is in second place in the MLS Eastern Conference. The Dallas Burn, with 20 points, is last in the Western Conference. The teams play Saturday (8:30 p.m. on Comcast).

→ BANK SHOT: Will Kenny Perry repeat at the U.S. Bank Championship, ending Sunday (3 p.m. on CBS)?

→ THE RIVALRY: Manny Ramirez and the Boston Red Sox host the New York Yankees this weekend, with TV covering Saturday's (3 p.m. on Fox) and Sunday's games (8 p.m. on ESPN).

RUGBY | Rush Job New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark is a sports fan. Maybe too much so. Reuters reported that Clark is under fire after her motorcade broke speed limits last week so she could attend a rugby match between New Zealand and Australia. Last Saturday, Clark was stuck on the South Island and her flight was canceled, so her police escort decided to drive Clark 120 miles to Christchurch in two hours to catch another flight. The open road limit in New Zealand is 62 miles per hour and 31 mph in towns. The opposition ACT party's justice spokesman Stephen Franks said Clark must take full responsibility for her motorcade breaking the law. (EXPRESS)

No Rest for the Weary

Perry tries to defend title in Milwaukee while fighting jet lag

GOLF | Still yawning and a bit bleary-eyed, defending champion Kenny Perry tried to adjust his golf game Wednesday during practice at the U.S. Bank Championship.

He was among a dozen players looking to shake their jet lag and reset their internal clocks after spending the weekend at Royal Troon in Scotland.

Kenny Perry will face a hard rough when playing this weekend's event in Milwaukee.

MIKE FINN-KELCEY/REUTERS

After landing at O'Hare International Airport on Monday, Perry caught a 90-minute ride to Milwaukee, dropped off his clubs at Brown Deer Park and hit the sack by 8 o'clock.

Tossing and turning until 6 a.m., he finally grabbed some breakfast and hit the golf course at 7, practiced for 11 hours and again hit the pillow at 8 Tuesday night. He slept in Wednesday — until 4 a.m.

Perry, last year's champion in Milwaukee, is coming off a 16th-place finish at the British Open, which he considered skipping, worried it might mess up his game with two of his favorite tournaments coming up — this one and next week's Buick Open.

Perry's game is a good fit for this event. The Brown Deer layout measures 6,759 yards, one of the shortest on the PGA Tour. To put some teeth into the par-70 course, the rough is exceptionally high around the greens.

Loren Roberts, a two-time winner in Milwaukee, said the rough is similar to that of a U.S. Open. He was among several golfers this week who got in a practice round or two 45 miles away at Whistling Straits, where the PGA Championship will be played in three weeks.

Not Perry. "Everybody keeps saying, 'You've got to go get some practice time,'" he said. "I haven't had a chance in my schedule." ARNIE STAPLETON (AP)

Lopez Dominates Sox, Again

BASEBALL | Few pitchers enjoy facing the Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park. Rodrigo Lopez is one of them.

Melvin Mora homered twice and drove in four runs, Lopez baffled Boston again and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Red Sox 8-3 in the opener of a day-night doubleheader Thursday.

"I like to pitch here," Lopez said as a smile flashed across his face. "The history of the ballpark and the fans create an awesome atmosphere."

Miguel Tejada added a two-run shot for Baltimore, which won its fourth straight for the first time since May 28-31.

The Orioles scored three runs in the first inning with only one out against rookie Abe Alvarez, making things easier for Lopez. Eight of his 30 career wins have come against the Red Sox.

Lopez (8-6) gave up one run and 10 hits in six innings, improving to 8-2 in his career against the Red Sox. He is 3-0 with a 1.06 ERA against them this season. (AP)

Baseball Denies Report on Expos

BASEBALL | Major League Baseball players' union officials today denied reports on ESPN that they told some Montreal Expos players during a closed-door meeting on Tuesday that they will likely be playing in the Washington, D.C.-area next year.

"What we essentially told them is that we have reason to expect Major League Baseball will make a decision, hopefully by the owners' meeting in a few weeks ... and that a number of places are on the list," said MLB Players Association Executive Director Donald Fehr.

MLB President Bob DuPuy called the report "preposterous, not true."

Armstrong wins third consecutive stage at Tour

CYCLING | Overpowering in the mountains, now unbeatable in a sprint. Seems there's nothing Lance Armstrong can't do as he rides inexorably into Tour de France history, utterly outclassing his rivals.

With a stunning final dash of speed, Armstrong snatched victory from German Andreas Kloden at the end of the Tour's hardest Alpine stage, pedaling so furiously that his bicycle swung wildly beneath him.

The win Thursday was Armstrong's fourth this Tour — matching his best in previous years when he also dominated — and his third in three consecutive days, allowing him to all but lock up a record sixth-straight crown.

It also was perhaps the most incredible. Even Armstrong seemed to find his sprint finish hard to believe. A beaming smile on his face, he jubilantly pumped his fists in the air as he zoomed past Kloden, who seemed destined to win until Armstrong edged him at the line.

"No gifts this year," the five-time champion said during the 17th stage. "I want to win."

Aside from satisfaction, the victory earned Armstrong 20 bonus seconds that helped extend his already sizable overall lead on Italian Ivan Basso to 4 minutes, 9 seconds. Barring disaster, that is more than enough to carry the Texan through to the finish in Paris on Sunday to become the only six-time winner of the 101-year-old cycling marathon.

Armstrong's original plan had been to let Landis win. But in the end, the chance for a 20th career individual victory in his favorite cycling race was too good to pass up.

Bourne Again

In a stylish sequel, Matt Damon's spycraft shows class and smarts

FILM | Jason Bourne's fans will have no trouble remembering who he is, even if he can't.

Seamlessly picking up the tale of the amnesiac assassin from 2002's hit "The Bourne Identity," the sequel overcomes a couple of distracting flaws to deliver another solid thrill ride.

"The Bourne Supremacy" has smarts and class lacking in most summer thrillers. The action complements the bigger drama, erupting as Matt Damon's Jason Bourne reacts by instinct to each contingency. Bourne is like a prowling predator, never at rest even when he's still, his body intuitively tuned to attack when it's to his advantage and flee when his survival is at stake.

Director Paul Greengrass takes over from Doug Liman, who made the first movie and remains an executive producer on the sequel.

The film has Bourne still on the run from his old CIA handlers and haunted by fleeting images from his shattered memory as he and Marie (Franka Potente), the muse and emotional anchor he found in the first movie, hide out in India.

WHO AM I? Both Damon and Stiles' characters have developed since 2002.

A shadowy Russian oil tycoon has framed Bourne for the deaths of two American agents, prompting CIA honcho Pamela Landy (Joan Allen) to hunt down Bourne.

Meantime, a hit man tries to kill him, the resulting tragedy sending Bourne on a mission that's part revenge, part redemption.

Returning from the first film are Brian Cox as shady spymaster Ward Abbott, Julia Stiles as greenhorn agent liaison Nicky and Gabriel Mann as agent Danny Zorn. Chris Cooper, the heavy of "The Bourne Identity," appears in flashbacks.

The entire cast is tremendous. An ominously brooding presence, Damon has long stretches with no dialogue, yet even in loner mode, his twitchy expressions and body language convey emotion.

The filmmakers have concocted clever found-object solutions to get Bourne out of tight spots, bolstering the character's credibility as a man up to any challenge.

Allen brings steely grace to the movie, and Stiles subtly presents a character evolving from naivete to cynicism. Potente's Marie radiates endearing good will and affection, and Greengrass crafts one of his most artful, though tragic, images around the character.

This may be the end of Damon's Bourne saga, but the film signals good things to come from Greengrass.

Fangs for Nothing

Look what 'Catwoman' dragged in — a tedious summer action bust

FILM | If the "Spider-Man" movies represent all that can be wondrous and inspiring in a comic-book adaptation, "Catwoman" is the opposite.

This is cinema for the attention span-challenged — a soulless amalgamation of quick edits, computer images and nausea-inducing dolly shots. For an action movie, it's also mind-numbingly boring.

Yes, Halle Berry is a jaw-dropping sight in her Catwoman uniform. But since the scenes in which she kicks butt and leaps about with feline agility are sped up, you don't get to ogle her for long anyway.

Berry plays Patience Phillips, a meek and lonely graphic designer at a cosmetics company who toils under George Hedare (Lambert Wilson) and his aging supermodel wife, Laurel (Sharon Stone).

Patience overhears that there's something wrong with the company's new anti-aging skin cream and is killed by Laurel's thugs. An Egyptian Mau brings her back to life and in no time she's prancing along rooftops in a black leather bra, causing chaos with the crack of her whip.

Doing the right thing apparently requires protracted cat fights with Laurel. The director, who goes by "Pitof," tries to infuse these brawls with Sapphic tension. But if Laurel and Catwoman had started making out at the top of the Hedare beauty headquarters, even that wouldn't make the movie any more interesting.

Afraid of the Dark

DVD | First-time writer-director Richard Kelly's breathtakingly ambitious "Donnie Darko" was one of the best pictures released in 2001. Now that it has returned in a 20-minute longer — and richer — director's cut, it seems sure to be ranked as one of the key American films of the decade.

That "Donnie Darko: The Director's Cut" is complete does not mean it is any clearer, for it is nothing if not confounding.

In the title role, Jake Gyllenhaal is a disaffected teenager in classic upscale suburbia. Donnie, given to sleepwalking, hallucinations and communicating with a giant monstrous-looking imaginary rabbit named Frank (James Duval), is first seen asleep in the middle of a rural road. By the time he awakens, a voice tells him that in 28 days the world will come to an end.

These surreal introductory notes serve to point up the less dramatic absurdities of everyday life that confront a youth of soaring intelligence like Donnie while they pass unnoticed by those who live largely on life's surface.

The film is propelled by Donnie's fear (which he considers may be irrational) that time really is running out and he becomes consumed with the desire to save it. Finding a book written by a former nun and teacher at his school, called "The Philosophy of Time Travel," he begins to think he may have found the answer. The film's additional footage consists mainly of tantalizing quotes from this text plus an illuminating scene between Donnie and his father.

Droll, subversively hilarious, "Donnie Darko" is as amusing as it is provocative, and it is likely to be the subject of scholarly explanations for years to come. At heart its message is clear enough — keep an open mind, embrace each other and the universe with its seemingly infinite possibilities, come what may.

D.C. Gets Theatrical

STAGE | Now that the cicadas are gone, it's officially safe to spend an evening outdoors. Olney Theatre's National Players provide a chance to do just that with their free Summer Shakespeare Tour; "Romeo and Juliet" is at Silver Plaza in downtown Silver Spring on Sunday.

That Montgomery County center for the arts also presents several productions in its Potomac Theatre Festival: the Tony Award-winning "Copenhagen," Gore Vidal's "The Best Man," Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" and Judith Thompson's "Perfect Pie," at only $10 per show.

Every summer, theater-lovers head to West Virginia for the Contemporary American Theater Festival at Shepherd University. This year's fest presents: "Homeland Security," a Little League coaches' tale called "Rounding Third," "Flag Day" and "The Rose of Corazon: A Texas Songplay." Learn more at www.catf.org.

Reviews by The Washington Post's Ann Hornaday, Stephen Hunter, Michael O'Sullivan and Desson Thomson.

A CINDERELLA STORY (PG, 97 minutes)

Let me get quickly to the word that best describes this movie. It is horrible. Cutesie-pootsie Hilary Duff plays Sam, a contemporary Cinderella dreaming about finding her prince. Turns out, that prince-to-be is the school's star quarterback, Austin (Chad Michael Murray). In one of the movie's dumbest conceits, both create romantic heat at the masquerade prom party, apparently unable to see through each other's flimsy disguise. No wonder they're destined for each other. (DT)

THE CORPORATION (unrated, 145 minutes)

This documentary may make you physically ill, and not just the segment about pus-tainted milk from bio-engineered dairy cows. Filmmakers Mark Achbar, Jennifer Abbott and Joel Bakan argue that business conglomerates have grown so powerful and so insensitive to such issues as pollution and the reliance on sweat shops that they have become Frankenstein's monsters, threatening to destroy their makers, i.e., us. The thesis is cogent, scary and even sickening. (MO)

BIG PICTURE MEDIA

A protester in "The Corporation," a muckraking look at businesses' power.

THE DOOR IN THE FLOOR (R, 111 minutes)

Kim Basinger and Jeff Bridges star as Marion and Ted Cole, a couple coping—or not—with unspeakable loss. On the verge of their breakup, Ted hires an Exeter student, Eddie (Jon Foster), as his assistant for the summer, and the teenager and Marion gravitate toward each other. Tod Williams' film doesn't deepen as it progresses but becomes flimsier and more trivial, finally succumbing to an awkwardly executed tonal shift. (AH)

I, ROBOT (R, 114 minutes)

The year is 2035 and Chicago police detective Del Spooner (Will Smith) is called to investigate the apparent suicide of robotics pioneer Alfred Lanning (James Cromwell). Spooner suspects that one of Lanning's creations had a hand in his death. Soon he's on the trail of one robot that leads him on a high-tech goose chase. While Smith is given plenty of car chases and death-defying predicaments to show off his signature brand of offhand derring-do, the movie at its core has to do with relationships. (SH)

IMELDA (unrated, 103 minutes) If self-absorption were a sport, Imelda Marcos would be the Lance Armstrong, the Muhammad Ali, the Michael Jordan. In Ramona S. Diaz's revelatory documentary about the former first lady of the Philippines, the subject tells stories about her great beauty and powers of attraction, and explains that her spending on clothes and shoes (and her husband's 1972 imposition of martial law) was a morale booster for the Filipino poor. (DT)

RIDING GIANTS (PG-13, 101 minutes)

Pro-skateboarder-turned-filmmaker Stacy Peralta ("Dogtown and Z-Boys") re-creates the pulse-pounding thrill of riding giant waves and tells the dramatic story of the riding giants. Peralta touches the sport's historical bases, but he's careful not to make "Giants" seem like a museum piece. When he interviews such pioneers as Greg "The Bull" Noll, the staleness in the room is swept away by a spray of salt air and blowing sand. (MO)

ON TV THIS WEEKEND

OLIVE OIL, DIRT & VIRGINS
CHAMPIONS OF OLYMPIA (Fri., 9 p.m., Science) offers a re-creation of the very first Greek games based on archeological discoveries. Apparently, after ancient athletes warmed up with an olive oil massage, their bodies were covered with dirt to reduce perspiration and act as a sun block. The ancient games and training were accompanied by music; the Greeks believed that it elevated the soul. Women participated in ceremonial events, but only virgins were allowed as spectators.

DEATH IS SO WHATEVER
No major faith ever imagined an after-life quite as peculiar and mundane as the antics on the cable drama DEAD LIKE ME (Sun., 10 p.m., Showtime), now entering its sophomore season.

As we learned last year, George (Ellen Muth) is a teenager who died in a ball of flames when a piece of space debris fell from the sky. She was bickering with her parents at the time, and still has “issues.” So do they.

George must spend an indeterminate period as a reaper, or collector of souls. The job isn’t as dramatic as it sounds, and to make matters worse, reapers have to earn their own keep. George works as a temp. Her colleague Roxy (Jasmine Guy) works as a meter maid.

“Dead” may be too flippant for some tastes. But all the morbid whimsy is just the reapers’ way of coping with their grim job. And George’s surly observations continually inform us that her profound teen melancholy was not interred with her remains.

POULTRY IN MOTION
Fans who prefer their Mel Gibson movies uncontroversial might enjoy CHICKEN RUN (Sat., 8 p.m., NBC), the 2000 clay-animated barnyard comedy that recreates the tension of P.O.W. dramas like “The

ALL A-CLUCKING: Does Gibson regret voicing a rooster hunk in “Chicken Run”?

Great Escape” in a British poultry farm in the 1950s.

FOUR FROM A MASTER
Turner Classic Movies celebrates Orson Welles with a four-film festival, beginning with his 1941 screen debut, CITIZEN KANE (Sat., 8 p.m.). THE LADY FROM SHANGHAI (10:15 p.m.) follows, co-starring Welles’ then-wife Rita Hayworth and featuring a shoot-’em-up in a funhouse.

If “Kane” is considered the greatest American film ever made, Welles’ THE MAGNIFICENT AMBERSONS (midnight) has been called the greatest film never seen. Hollywood editors cut the director’s version to ribbons. Thus began Welles’ life-long feud with the studios.

The 1946 thriller THE STRANGER (2 a.m.) stars the director himself as a Nazi war criminal hiding in disguise on an American college campus.

GREAT STORY, THOUGH
PRIMAL SCREAM (Sun., 8 p.m., Discovery) Shark Week kicks off with an hour-long documentary about underwater photographer Valerie De La Valdene’s too-close encounter with a swarm of sharks. As she fought, and screamed, for her life, Valerie’s video camera recorded it all. TIGER SHARK ATTACK: BEYOND FEAR (9 p.m.) follows.

TOTS ON THE TRAPEZE
Do children still fantasize about running away and joining the circus? Linda Ellerbee hosts the “Nick News” special ON THE ROAD WITH CIRCUS KIDS (Sun., 8:30 p.m., Nickelodeon), the lowdown on growing up under the big top.

FREAK SHOW
CONAN THE DESTROYER (Sat., 8 p.m., AMC) California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in this 1984 fantasy along with Grace Jones and Wilt Chamberlain. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Nowhere are party differences more apparent than in the size and cut of political T-shirts. In our quest for bold-yet-cute messages, we found baby tees and tanks aplenty for liberal-minded fashionistas. In contrast, T-shirts for Republicans tended toward the boxy and the beefy (and in some cases, the scratchy, but nothing that fabric softener won't fix). Below, behold garb for both the left and the right — plus one unaffiliated option for the fashionable swing voter. JENNIE KIM (EXPRESS)

'Abuse Me More, British Press'

JAMES HEWITT, a former lover of Princess Diana, was arrested and detained on suspicion of a Class-A drug offense — a category that includes heroin and cocaine — in London on Wednesday. He was released Thursday on bail. Hewitt, a former cavalry officer, was branded a “love rat” by the British press after publishing a book in which he discussed his relationship with the princess, who died in a car accident in 1997. In 2002, he threatened to sell love letters written to him by Diana. (AP)

CONFUSION
Cho Too Political
For Political Event

MARGARET CHO has been uninvited from headlining an event scheduled to coincide with the Democratic National Convention. The Human Rights Campaign, one of 10 gay and lesbian organizations hosting the Unity 2004 event in Boston on Monday, rescinded its invitation after officials decided her politically charged material could take the focus off gay unity. “[They’ve been] aware of Margaret’s material for years,” her spokesman said. “So why did they hire her?” (AP)

Is Cho itching for revenge?

SECRETS
I Do, I Don't: Stars Fake Marriage for Easier Divorce

Two years ago, BRANDY announced that she had been secretly married for months. The real secret may be that she was never married at all. Ex-husband (or is he?) Robert Smith told New York radio station WBLS-FM that he and Brandy were never wed as she had claimed. Speaking to Wendy Williams on Tuesday, Smith said their supposed marriage was a ruse to protect the image of Brandy, who was then pregnant with their daughter, Sy'rai. Brandy released a statement that read: “I am deeply hurt and shocked by the things that Robert has been saying ... we still share a common bond through our daughter, Sy'rai.” (AP)

Kiefer: The Man, The Mystery, the Weirdo

KIEFER SUTHERLAND stunned a group of small-town New Zealand women with an impromptu strip routine at a club in the town of Raetihi on Tuesday. Sutherland whipped off his shirt, waving it above his head to the tune of the Tom Jones’ hit “You Can Leave Your Hat On” at Raetihi’s

Cosmopolitan Club, a local newspaper reported. The women were watching Men of Steel — a male revue act — and Sutherland was drinking at the bar before deciding to join the act. He was then ushered off the stage. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

YOUR LISTING OF the Smithsonian Resident Associates program "Gateway to Kabbalah — A Spiritual Quest" in Thursday's Weekend Pass, omitting any reference to Kabbalah as an aspect of Jewish theology, misinforms. Rather than a "mystical Hollywood tradition," Kabbalah represents the Jewish search for insight into the essence of God. In my opinion, your pop-culture characterization of Kabbalah does a disservice both to your readers and to the seminar's organizers.

WHAT A WASTE of space the article about the Lexus SC430 was in Wednesday's Cars section. The days of typesetting cars to genders died out with the Mazda Miata in the '90's. First of all, the car's price has nothing to do with the gender of the consumer. In addition, pointing out that the SC430 may be the only car on the market that tilts toward women is absurd and not really based in fact. I am a 21-year-old male driver of this car, and I certainly didn't buy it because it was "pretty."

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Someone or something that you've always wanted may actually be seeking you out. Try to be in the right place right now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — The pace will pick up dramatically, requiring a great deal more attention than you've been giving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You may be unusually unpredictable, and those close to you may not understand what you're after.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You may encounter unexpected troubles that are likely to erupt into personal battles, but all can be solved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may find yourself risking a valuable friendship merely to score points that, in the long run, are less important than expected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — A little sentimentality goes a long way, but be sure to look at a pivotal relationship from a down-to-earth perspective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — A meeting of minds can provide you with more than expected, and the gains you enjoy will be more than merely financial.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Danger may arise as a result of your insistence that others do things your way. Some may be neither willing nor prepared.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Fulfillment will come to you in an unusual form, thanks to someone who has been looking out for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You may require more in the way of excitement and challenge than usual, and if you wait awhile, you may have it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — It's a good day to look ahead and plan for financial instability that may be just around the corner. Prepare, and you needn't lose it all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — See if a closer focus doesn't enable you to achieve more. You can find yourself in a new realm before the day is out.

Sept. 11 Report

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Washington Post Managing Editor STEVE COLL was online Thursday to discuss the 9/11 commission's report.

When I hear that President Bush and former President Clinton won't shoulder the blame, I can't help but wonder if committee members agreed: If we don't point the finger at my guy, we won't point it at yours, we'll blame the "infrastructure."

It was a bipartisan commission and the failures it investigated crossed Republican and Democratic administrations. That did help constrain the partisan aspects of the commission's work.

An advantage was that it allowed them to concentrate on facts, wherever they led. A potential disadvantage, says Richard Clarke at least, is that it may have led the commission to shy away from some of the most controversial questions, which in this election year are inevitably partisan.

I am curious as to the timing of the release of the 9/11 report. I am afraid that presidential politics will overwhelm the initial release. What, if any, constructive steps do you think will be taken between now and the election?

It's unlikely that the big reform recommendations will be addressed before November. That's not necessarily a bad thing. After the election the political direction of the country will be much clearer. The president, whoever he is, will be in a much stronger position; the Congress will know who is in charge for a while. That is when a reform package is most likely to come together politically, if one is to be adopted.
